You Taught Me

You taught me to hold my head up high

To step outside of my comfort zone

To walk with my feet on the ground and my head in the sky

And to move forwards with the strength of a woman, not the fear of a child

You taught me the importance of hard work

To follow my dreams with an open mind

To embrace the little differences that make me .. my oddities .. my quirks

And to never stop moving towards the future of my dreams

You taught me not be afraid to go against the crowd

To wear my crocs and socks with pride

To sing my own song .. loud and proud

And to know that independence is different from loneliness ..

Laziness is different from taking time out..

Loving someone is different to relying on someone ..

Knowledge is different to arrogance ..

You taught me the true value of family and community

But also the beauty of the natural world

I feel proud to tell you that my happy place is outside .. in nature..

with the sun on my face and feet in the dirt ..

I love the quietness... the beauty.. the serenity

You taught me that the two most important things in life are to never stop learning and never stop loving

You have taught me so much and for that I am eternally grateful and one thing is certain ...

I will never stop loving you.
